Computer system house

We are a long-established system house in Munich, which is looking for a customer service manager for its it-service (network support) division with long-standing regular customers. He should want to become self-employed or already be and can expand the small but functioning business unit as a freelancer with the help of the general manager. Capital does not have to be brought along, but you should get by with little revenue for a certain amount of time until you have sat down and the sector yields greater returns. In the medium to long term, the customer service is to provide its services permanently by 3-10 service personnel. The development/expansion work should be worthwhile in that, if successful, a separate service company is founded in which the customer service manager can participate in a minority party. Employment up to the management is then possible.
